WINTER GIFT EDIT

a thoughtful gift edit

We are pleased to bring you our first ever winter gift edit.

Over the next 24 pages, we have curated a collection of brands, products, projects and experiences that reflect our shared values of timeless style, functionality, conscious design and connection to place.

We have chosen companies we are proud to be associated with – brands who are transparent about how and where their products are made, take care to reduce their environmental impact and consider the longevity of their wares. We think these brands are worth your attention and we hope you find it useful during the season of giving and beyond.

In return for being featured in our gift edit, all of these brands have contributed towards our Collector's Edition crowdfunding campaign – either with a donation or by providing a reward – and we would like to thank them for helping to secure the future of Ernest.

Please feel free to share this digital edition with your friends and family. You can also order a printed copy at ernestjournal.co.uk

own less, use forever

Now, more than ever, we're realising the importance of buying less and using it for as long as possible. This is why Millican believe that you only need one bag for everything, whether for commuting in the city or hiking in the hills.

Their roll packs (as part of their Core and Maverick collection) are made for everyday travel, carrying what you need to get from A to B without fuss or compromise on aesthetics, rain or shine.

The Maverick roll packs (15-25L) have adjustable ergonomic shoulder straps, removable waist and sternum straps for hiking and cycling, and internal and external pockets, while the Core roll packs (20L) have an internal laptop sleeve, an external bottle pocket and a clip-on bike light loop. All packs are made from 100% recycled polyester.

belongings to cherish

Founders of The Future Kept, Jeska and Dean, carefully seek out beautiful and useful items for life and the home that are made with love, thoughtfulness and detail. Among their collection you'll find lambswool blankets, organic herbal tea blends, hand-poured soy candles and leather camera bags – all created by people with a passion for what they do, and a care for the future of the world we live in. Embracing this passion, The Future Kept are proud to be part of the 1% for the Planet global movement, committed to giving 1% of all sales directly to environmental not-for-profit groups whose focus is the protection, preservation and restoration of our planet.

stationery for the soul

So, why notebooks in a digital world? If you've ever experienced the joy of channeling your thoughts through a favourite pen or pencil onto a fresh sheet of paper, you already know the answer. Wilder. strives to encourage more people to unplug, recharge and experience these simple pleasures with their collection of pocketbooks and A5 notebooks. They come in a choice of lined, dot grid and blank pages, which are made from buttery-smooth FSC-accredited paper produced by one of Britain's last remaining mills. Wilder. have also added wooden HB graphite pencils to their collection – the perfect accompaniment to their delightful notebooks.

time to be stilled

It all started when Moorswood founder Charles Fanshawe was out training with his local search-and-rescue team on Dartmoor, he thought, "Wouldn't it be nice to have something to sit on when we pause for a cuppa?". Wishing to avoid the flimsy foam seat pads on the market, Moorswood developed their own line of Field Rugs made of tweed and waxed cotton and available in a range of sizes: the picnic blanket-sized 'Dart Roll', the single-person 'Ramblers Roll' (left and above), and – for a forest bathe (or snooze in the woods) – the longer length 'Forest Roll'. The rugs come in a variety of designs, including this oak leaf print by Cornish artist Lou Tonkin (pictured).

curated with love

Dörte and Malcolm love to curate items they truly admire; connecting with artists and makers through a mutual love of simple, functional and beautiful designs. An artist himself, Malcolm has recently created the Brighton Map, a black and white, meticulously detailed hand-drawn map of the coastal city – now featured as art prints, colouring posters, greeting cards and tea towels alongside Lewes Map Store's ethically sourced homeware, accessories, jewellery, beauty products and ceramics. The store offers free gift wrapping, and each order is shipped using eco-friendly packaging.

shared moments in the wild

Muscles aching, cheeks red and numb – surely nothing can be more cheering after a long hike with friends than a shared flask of tea or perhaps even a cheeky tippie of something stronger? Hôrd recognises the sanctity of these shared moments in the outdoors, and so curate a range of leather hip flasks and bottles wrapped in hand-dyed leather to carry with you on your next adventure. You can even take your favourite place with you – Hôrd can hand-engage the contour patterns of your chosen mountain or location on the leather wrap of the flask or bottle. This bespoke service is also available for their leather key fobs and wallets.

It all started with a bag. Back in 1995, Tina Guillory saw the need for what would become the first Carrier Company product – the Classic Carrier – a generous square of jute fabric with a handle at each corner, traditionally used by gardeners in the past. This became the forerunner for a range of workwear and outdoor clothing inspired by generations of family life in rural Norfolk. Among the collection you'll find fisherman's smocks, dungarees, jackets, capes and lambswool jumpers, all built to last and designed to improve with age.

ideas etched in glass

Can you bottle happiness? Or creativity? Or sarcasm? And just where do our lost marbles go exactly? In the world of [vinegar & brown paper], contemporary glass etcher Andy Poplar translates these musings onto apothecary jars, milk bottles, whisky tumblers and decanters, crafting iconic pieces to sit pride of place on your bookshelf, drinks cabinet or writing desk. The apothecary bottles are available in three sizes and have an airtight stopper, so are perfect for storing all kinds of liquids (like gin, for example), while the ink bottles come full with Parker ink, just waiting to pen those stories yet to be written.

inspired by dartmoor

Moon & Moor's co-founder Corrinne Eira Evans is the gallery's on-site jeweller, making contemporary pieces from recycled precious metals for the shop's collection as well as bespoke commissions. Her partner Andrew Olly Oliver paints original landscapes inspired by Dartmoor, available to buy online and in-store alongside his limited edition prints. If you're keen to flex your own creative muscles, you can sign up to one of Moon & Moor's workshops in jewellery making, lino printing, pottery, macrame and other crafts, hosted by local makers.

There's something otherworldly about the salt marsh that wraps around the Norfolk coast – an eerie, intertidal landscape where freshwater and salty sea merge. Embark on a 'Salt Marsh Sail' with Coastal Exploration Company and let the tide carry you deep into this remarkable landscape on an engineless mussel flat, where you can pause to swim in the creeks, forage for samphire and cockles and feel the mud oozing between your toes, before feasting on a locally made Norfolk brunch and letting the outgoing tide pull back into the harbour.

Travelling the coast in a decommissioned ambulance, photographer Jack Lowe is capturing the crew of all 238 RNLI lifeboat stations in the UK and Ireland using a method called wet plate collodion. At each lifeboat station, he captures three things: the boathouse view (of the waters they're protecting), a portrait of every coxswain or senior helm and a group portrait of the volunteer crew. The technique is unapologetically analogue, and far from simple: chemicals are applied to glass, which are then exposed to light through his 1905 camera and processed in his mobile darkroom, Neena. The resulting images are irreproducible and uneditable, capturing the humility and generosity that exist within coastal communities and lifeboat crews.

We spoke to Jack for issue five of Ernest (2016), when he was one year into his project. Since then, his journey has unfolded in unexpected and remarkable ways. Five years and 150 lifeboat stations in, Jack's coastal travels came to an abrupt pause when social distancing restrictions were announced in March 2020. Taking the opportunity to reevaluate his project, Jack built an independent membership platform called The LSP Society, then went on to develop an app for iOS and Android where members can connect, access extra films, audio, blog posts and online talks, while helping Jack to see this historic odyssey through to completion.

closer to the wild

Whether you're sharing food with your kin, unwinding by the pool, curling up with a book in the library or paddling out from the hotel's private jetty – a stay at Another Place, The Lake is all about cosying up indoors after being out in the elements, exploring the wonders of the Northern Lakes. Thermos flasks, wool blankets and, of course, Tunnocks teacakes are provided in your rooms should you wish to head out to stargaze on the lakeshore. And if constellation-spotting really is your thing, you can now book a stay in one of the hotel's brand new shepherd huts, available from spring 2022, fitted with stargazing roofs, or perhaps in the new treehouse, which has floor-to-ceiling views of Ullswater.

Escape to the Lake, two-night, mid-week stay with dinner included from £230pp.

ideas etched in glass

Under the guise of [vinegar & brown paper], Andy Poplar has spent the last 10 years taking iconic items of glassware and bringing them to life with the tools of wit, wordplay and a slightly askew way of looking at things. From apothecary jars to nostalgia filled milk bottles, it never fails to amaze him that you can now find pieces of [vinegar & brown paper] on bookshelves from York to New York.

COASTAL EXPLORATION CO.

recharge on nature

After many nomadic years working as a Royal Marine and a humanitarian, Henry Chamberlain returned home to the wild Norfolk coast to build an adventurous sailing business with a community of like-minded people. His vision focuses on our rich maritime history, using traditional wooden boats, while combining his passion with a strand of altruism through social and environmental change.
